While on mission in a foreign nation, when missionaries or other Christian leaders lead a lost soul to Christ and baptize them, their task is accomplished, and they then return home. At this point, it is all in the local pastor's hands to teach them and keep them in the flock. The problem is, who will help the pastors? What is the pastor's workload?

BTCA takes a few extra steps and cultivates the lives of our new brothers and sisters. Creating jobs, restoring hope, seeking ways to improve their lives, teaching them languages, and staying with them for an extended period to better understand their needs. This is not rocket science, nor is it something that other organizations are not already doing. Visit www.fcsministries.org (Focused Community Strategies) to see how this method is being implemented in Atlanta, Georgia.

BTCA is just getting started. Come join our team and serve Him, for He is beside us, and all that we do is to glorify Him.

Maslow has this theory that, in my educated and evangelistic opinion, applies to missionaries. When the weak are at their lowest, we need to step in and help them reach a point where they understand why they were baptized and how they must live their lives in a Christian manner. Moving them up the pyramid is done in a holistic (whole) manner. As they move up and cultivate, they will begin to establish strong roots in their lives.
